Responding to call after call

By Lisa Boudreau

Calvin Deyermund, an Andover native and 14-year veteran of the Lawrence police department, longs for the "good ol' days" when policemen were assigned to direct traffic on Essex Street. Those days are gone, he sadly admitted last Friday when he escorted a Townsmen reporter around the city and pointed out neighborhoods pocked with graffiti brazenly marking-off gang territory and streets striped with skid marks left by thieves in stolen cars.

"The days of the patrol officer and the walking beat are really obsolete. We spend our days and nights responding to call after call," said the Summer Street resident.

During the past 14 years Sergeant Deyermund has been to the hospital about half a dozen times because of injuries sustained on the job. He's even fallen from a two-story

South principal now at Sanborn

By Lisa Boudreau

The first phase of School Superintendent Mark McQuillan's promised staff rotation was completed last week when he announced Jade Reitman, principal of South Elementary for the past seven years, would be transferred to Sanborn Elementary.

Sanborn principal Eileen Woods was recently hired to be the town's new assistant superintendent for curriculum.

"I feel the time is right to initiate the rotation," Dr. McQuillan told the Townsmen earlier last week.

"Every building (system-wide) now has a new administrator hired within the last two years," he said.

Ms. Reitman is the senior principal in the school system. Debra Dunn, principal of Ban-

Wingate nursing home opens its doors

By Don Staruk

WINGATE, the 123-bed nursing home at 80 Andover St., passed its state licensing inspection on Thursday of last week and company officials expected the first residents to move in this week.

An invitation-only grand opening is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 23, but the facility is open daily for tours.

Wingate at Andover Rehabilitative and Skilled Nursing Residence is owned and operated by Continental Health Care Inc., a subsidiary of Continental Wingate Company Inc., of Boston. The company has two other nursing homes, one in Reading and one in Wilbraham, and is in the process of adding another 1,000 beds in the northeast, according to Scott Schuster, president of Wingate Health Care.

The facility needs five private-pay residents before it can be inspected and approved to accept Medicaid patients. It will also seek approval to accept Medicare patients in the near future.

"We anticipate that a couple of months down the road," Mr. Schuster said.

When fully occupied, 60 percent or more residents will be on Medicaid, and a large portion of the remainder will be on Medicare, according to Mr. Schuster.

"Which is about the average," he said. "It's really a small minority

Are we pushing our kids too much?

By Neil Fater

Thomas, 11, used to like baseball. But now his dad yells so much every time that someone on his Little League team makes an error that the young third baseman prays for rain. Fourteen-year-old Vickie's parents want her to be the top student in her eighth grade class, but sometimes Vickie feels intellectually inferior. Plus, her parents can't afford the clothes that her friends have and some tease her. Harold, all of 9, has a different problem. He'd like nothing better than to play tag and ride his bike with his friends but he has to sit at the piano for a couple of hours a day, because his mom says he has a gift. He'd like to send his "gift" back — unopened.

Certainly, every town has its share of such stories and America is well acquainted with them. But are they especially prevalent in Andover? Are we pushing our kids too hard? Are our children under too much pressure?

Just how many Tom, Vick, and Harrys are there in Andover?

Parents want more teen activities

By Lisa Boudreau

Parents want the town and the schools to organize more activities for teenagers this year, and a handful met recently with town and school officials to discuss ideas for new programs and lend support to past programs. (See related editorial, page 34.)

"I don't know what it is about Andover. There really is no center for the kids to go to if they want to hang out. There's not even a bowling alley," said Christine Edmonds, of 25 Chandler Road, who moved to town three years ago with her husband, Chris, and their three children.

"If they want to go somewhere, it's to Lawrence, to the movies, or to Tewksbury, to Fun Land (an amusement and sports park)," she said.

The meeting was hosted by Peg Campbell, co-director of the town's Department of Community Services, and was also attended by Tim Thomas, Andover High School principal, and Sondra Barch, a 1989 graduate of AHS.

Ms. Barch, now a college student, organizes summer teen programs for the Department of Community Services. According to Ms. Barch, the most popular DCS events this summer were bus trips to Boston's Hard Rock Cafe and the trips to Hampton Beach, N.H. She said mostly 13- and 14-year-olds went on the trips.

"Most of the older kids have jobs and are working during the time we run the trips," she said.

Mr. Edmonds said when his family moved to Andover three years ago, the town soccer league was a great vehicle for his sons, now 14 and 16, to meet friends.

"It helped them feel like they were part of the town," he said.

Mr. Edmonds said teens would be

Coffee house to open in Andover

Gourmet coffee, bagels from Brooklyn, N.Y., and live music played by local bands are soon to be featured in a new eatery located in the former railroad station on School Street.

Walter Pitts, a 1984 graduate of Andover High School, is waiting for the 20-day appeal period to end and for the town to issue permits so he can open the R&R Coffee House next month. The appeal period will end Thursday, Aug. 27.

Before permits can be issued, Mr. Pitts must add to the eight, on-sight parking spaces he has, according to conditions set by the Zoning Board of Appeals. Mr. Pitts is negotiating to use spaces in a nearby lot, said Lois Liberman of the building inspector's office.

If all goes as planned, Mr. Pitts said he will open the R & R Coffee House by the third week of September.

The coffee house will be opened from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. week nights and later on weekends, he said.

more interested in informal, less-organized activities. Ms. Barch agreed.

One possible option for teens is a coffee house planned to open in the vacant half of the old railroad station on School Street. (See related story, above.)

Walter Pitts, AHS class of 1984, who also attended the meeting, told parents he is in the final stages of getting the appropriate permits from the town. He plans to open his R&R Coffee House by the third week of September.

"I'm hoping it will be an informal place for people to meet and have a cup of coffee, sit and talk for a while. I also hope to have live music at night," he said.

Mr. Pitts also plans to have chess and checker boards, as well as other games, available in his coffee house, which will not serve alcohol.

Kathleen Bonanno, who moved to Andover from Lawrence last month with her 12-year-old son, said she'd like to see more activities for middle-school students.

"All the YMCA programs go up to sixth grade and I'm running out of options," she said.

Ms. Campbell said she was encouraged by the turnout at Monday night's meeting. Teens who have participated in DCS summer programs during the past two months told her they want to see more "open gym" recreation programs and weekend dances this school year.

The DCS has planned an open gym night just for high school students in the AHS gym on Saturday nights from 7 to 10 p.m. The first gym night is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 12, said Ms. Campbell. It will cost $2 for residents and $4 for non-residents, she said.

Ms. Campbell said she'd look into a gym night for middle school kids as well as talk to the schools' athletic director about intramural sports for kids at that level.

Another meeting is scheduled for Monday, Oct. 5, at 6:30 p.m. Mr. Pitts has volunteered the use of his coffee house for the meeting.

Postmaster resigns; to remain in Puerto Rico

By Don Staruk

Andover postmaster Tony Mendoza has resigned his job here and has a new job as postmaster in his home town of Aibonito, Puerto Rico.

Mr. Mendoza has been on special assignment for the Postal Service, first in Woburn then in Puerto Rico, since Sept. 16 of last year. That assignment was scheduled to be up this month, but Mr. Mendoza started his new job on July 25, according to Louis Pimpare, assistant postmaster in Andover. "That was his hometown," Mr. Pimpare said. "I don't think it's as big as Andover."

Mr. Mendoza was an assistant postmaster in Puerto Rico before he came to Andover in 1984.

He expressed his well-wishes to Andover residents when he stopped in to say goodbye recently and in a card he sent to the Townsman staff this week.

"I didn't become richer on my new assignment, but made to realize how rich I became with your friendship and the friendship of the wonderful community of Andover. A little part of my life is in Andover," Mr. Mendoza wrote.

William Farrow, director of field operations from the regional Postal Service office in Woburn, has been officer in charge at Andover in Mr. Mendoza's absence and will remain until a new postmaster is named.

A hiring freeze is on at the Postal Service, administrative reassignments are pending, and the reorganization could affect Andover.

"We should know within 60 days how it's going to shake out as far as the new positions," Mr. Farrow said. "I could fall into a district or I could fall into a postmaster position."

Both Mr. Farrow and Mr. Pimpare said they would like the postmaster job here.

"Course. Why wouldn't I? It's my home town. I was born and raised in Andover," Mr. Pimpare said Tuesday.

"Oh, sure. It's a good office. I love it here," Mr. Farrow said.

Approximately 114 employees work for the Postal Service in Andover.

Mr. Mendoza's wife, Zoraida; daughter, Glorivee, a student at the University of Massachusetts-Lowell; and son, Anthony, a senior at Andover High School, will probably stay at their Washington Park apartment until Anthony graduates in the spring.

Mr. Mendoza was unsympathetic as he glanced out the window at the snow falling in Andover last January, the day before he was to fly back to San Juan.

"While you're shoveling snow, I'll be shoveling sand," he joked.

Shoveling sand must be easier.

Methuen man is in race for Congress

By Don Staruk

David Coleman, a self-employed mortgage banker and father of three from Methuen, is the latest challenger to Rep. Chester Atkins, D-Concord, for the fifth district United States Congressional seat.

Mr. Coleman, 32, of 16 Christopher Drive, is running as an unenrolled voter and is already on the ballot for the November general election. This will be his first bid for public office.

"I'm running because I think it's time to have national health care insurance in this country," Mr. Coleman said during an interview at the Townsmen on Tuesday.

He spends $8,000 a year on health care for his own family, Mr. Coleman said, and finds it difficult to get by on his $35,000 annual income.

"It's just been killing me being a small businessman," Mr. Coleman said. "That's the main reason I'm running."

But he also wants to reduce the federal deficit, and thinks cutting back on foreign aid is the way to do that.

Mr. Coleman has a bachelor's

degree in political science from the University of Arkansas, studied international business at the School for International Training in Brattleboro, Vt., and spent a semester abroad studying at the London School of Economics.

He said 30 percent of World Bank funding and 25 percent of the money for the International Monetary Fund comes from the United States. While he understands foreign aid is essential to promote peace and democracy in some areas, specifically the former Soviet Union countries, he said some of that money should be put back into the United States.

He also supports increasing the minimum wage, which he said would, along with national health care, reduce people's dependence on welfare and the welfare budget.

He's studied Rep. Atkins' record for the last eight years in Congress and said he is ready to go up against him head-to-head after the primary, assuming the incumbent will win the nomination. Mr. Coleman said he will be the only one talking about the issues in the fall.

He got the taste for politics when he spent two months working in the field for Bill Clinton prior to the New Hampshire primary earlier this year. He was impressed with Mr. Clinton and the fact that he seemed to have an answer for every problem anyone put to him.

Mr. Coleman has lived in this area for eight years, but was born and raised in Arkansas and said he is a friend of Bill and Hillary Clinton and their children.

He is running as an unenrolled voter because he thinks he would have a tough time getting the Democratic nomination, and because he wouldn't want to have to conform to either party's platform.

He has no campaign funds right now, but said some exposure in the papers will help convince people, who he said are anxious to support him, that he is serious.

He said being black in this predominantly white district will not be an issue.

"I don't think it's going to be a problem at all," Mr. Coleman said. "People are going to be color blind, because I'm talking about the issues."

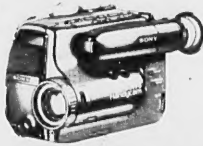

People would rather hear about health care, jobs, and paying for their kids' college, he said.

"We need people with a vision of this country in the future, and that's what I am going to be," he said.

Mr. Coleman and his wife, Piera, have three children, Jonathan, 5, Angelica, 3, and Derek, 1.

Locals attend convention

By Don Staruk

For at least one of the Andover Republicans at their party's convention in Houston this week, former president Ronald Reagan's speech on Monday night was the highlight of the first two days of activities.

"Monday night, seeing Ronald Reagan, was unbelievable," said Bob Manning, Republican Town Committee chairman. "His speech was so electrifying. It was a great way to kick off the convention. Reagan is clearly the number one highlight."

Mr. Manning is one of at least four Andover residents in Houston for the convention. Also in Houston are Governor's Councilor John Harris; Bobbi Rancourt, personal secretary to Gov. William Weld; and John Moffitt, former chief secretary to the governor. Mr. Manning and Mr. Harris are alternate delegates for the Massachusetts delegation.

"The town of Andover is well-represented here. Between the president and the rest of us, seeing how he went to high school here," Mr. Manning said.

President Bush attended Phillips Academy in Andover.

"It's fantastic. It's unbelievable," Mr. Manning said of the convention.

He flew to Houston Monday, "ate some real Mexican food," then headed to the Astrodome for Monday evening's speeches. Afterward, it was back to the hotel to a party put on by AT&T.

Delegates are being treated like royalty, with open bars and free food everywhere they go, Mr. Manning said. He didn't get in to his room until 3:30 a.m. Tuesday morning.

"You just meet so many new and interesting people," he said.

He was invited to a party with the Texas delegation Tuesday night and was again out until the wee hours of the morning.

Mr. Manning met and talked with Congressman Joe Barton and Sen. Phil Gramm, both of Texas. He thought Sen. Gramm's speech Tuesday night was "right on the money" and spoke to the philosophy of the Republican party.

"He and Jack Kemp last night talked about what the Republican Party means to me," Mr. Manning said.

He did not think Sen. Gramm and Tuesday night's other speakers were too focussed on slamming Bill Clinton, but said that was the intent on Monday night.

"Monday night was kind of flashy rhetoric," Mr. Manning said. "Reagan was in classic form."

He expected to hear about family values from Barbara Bush and Marilyn Quayle on Wednesday night and was looking forward to President Bush's speech on Thursday.

"Thursday I hope we're going to hear about the real substance from the president," Mr. Manning said. "He does have a plan and an agenda and I think he has to do a better job of communicating that to the American people."

Mr. Manning, like most Republicans this year, blamed the Democratically controlled Congress for the country's economic woes, and said a change in Congress is the only way to turn things around.

"Whether George Bush is elected or not isn't really going to matter unless we change Congress," Mr. Manning said. "Every tax bill and every spending bill must originate in the House of Representatives."

Gov. Weld's speech, in which he said he favored a woman's choice on abortion, was "interesting," Mr. Manning said.

"This is definitely a big pro-life crowd," he said.

Mr. Manning, 23, is the youngest member of the Massachusetts delegation. This being his first trip west of the Mississippi, he has taken time out for some fun.

He visited NASA and the Johnson Space Center on Tuesday, then went to Galveston where he took a swim in the Gulf of Mexico. He was headed to Astro World, an amusement park, Wednesday morning.

Frye Circle woman is struck by car

By Don Staruk

A 65-year-old resident was injured Wednesday morning when she was struck by a car at Frye Circle.

Claire Wermers, of 5A Frye Circle, received a two-inch cut on her head at about 8:30 a.m. when she was struck by a car as it was backing out of a parking space at the Andover Housing Authority's elderly housing complex off North Main Street.

She was taken to Lawrence General Hospital by ambulance and was still being evaluated when the Townsmen went to press Wednesday.

The name of the operator of the car was not available from police but it was an elderly man, according to Lt. Richard Enos.

Patrolman Charles Heseltine is investigating.

It's all in the cards for Andover man

By Neil Fater

Lee Rosenberg is still a bit disorganized.

He still has prices to put on some of his sport cards, and has a great deal of sorting to do. Plus, he isn't even sure what his market is going to be like here in town. But he can handle all of that.

"I've been relatively happy with my first week," he said.

It's the "stupid" phone calls, however, that are getting on his nerves.

"I have the same number as the library used to have five years ago or something," he said. And they keep on calling.

He just hopes they start calling via his front door — and that there are less wrong numbers. After all, the collector carries Mark McGuire not Mark Twain.

Mr. Rosenberg opened up the Boston Card Co. on Post Office Ave. a couple of weeks ago. He sells a slew of major league baseball, football, hockey and basketball cards, as well as comic, movie and other specialized products and cards. His most expensive are baseball cards from just after the turn of the century.

"I have three of them that I prize the most: The 1915 Cracker Jack; there's the Ty Cobb, of course, which was released in 1907-1911, I believe; and there is the Lajoie," also printed in that era, he said.

Mr. Rosenberg grew up in Baltimore. When he was a kid, he said, "I was more into basketball than I was into baseball." Though Larry Bird was an idol then, today he would most likely pluck down money to watch Michael Jordan.

But that is not all that has changed. Mr. Rosenberg used to lug his collectibles from card show to card show.

"I had been doing a lot of shows," but it began to get impractical, he said. "You get to a point where you either have to open up a store or you have to sell out. Plus, there are certain items which sell better in a store than at a show."

So he followed in his parents footsteps and opened up a card store.

"You get tired of carting everything around," he explained. "It is a lot of work to do shows."

Mr. Rosenberg decided to open Boston Cards in Andover, despite the recent closing of AJ Sports because he sees a favorable market here.

Although there is one other card store in town, on Lupine Road, he said he wouldn't mind if there were more in the area.

"If there were a ton of dealers on one street, I think it would be great," he said. He believes it would create the same type of "economic situation" as a card show and would attract more people to the area.

Although there are no other card stores on Post Office Ave. with him, Mr. Rosenberg is pleased to be on the same street as Paper Heroes Limited, an Andover comic book store.

"There are a lot of people who collect both cards and comic books," he said.

One of the reasons there has been an explosion in both the card and comic book world is because collecting has become extremely popular. But, unlike some people, Mr. Rosenberg understands why baseball and other sport cards have become such big business.

"It's sort of the kind of thing anyone can get into; people need something to do," he explained. "I read that there are about 10,000 new collectors every month. Sports have always been big, but sports are bigger than ever."

"People say this is a fad, but I don't think it is. People love sports so much, it's not a fad."

Yet, although card collecting is Mr. Rosenberg's business, card collecting is not a pure business to him. He believes that the only reason to collect is if you like the cards or the players — not to make a quick buck.

"I would never recommend collecting cards for money value," he said. "Never." If someone is collecting just to make money, he said, "I tell them they're collecting for the wrong reason."

In addition, Mr. Rosenberg is very open about card prices, saying that though the price guide books that are sold are fairly accurate for the newer cards, they are not very realistic in regards to older editions.

"The best way to see what the market conditions are is to go to a show," he said. Prices vary depending on player popularity and the location of his team.

Occasionally, the collector said, he will throw in an extra card of the child's favorite player if he knows the card is worth more to him or her than it is on paper.

Although he has been reasonably happy with business to date, he still can't tell what it will be like in the future.

"It's hard for me to gauge right now. I have to see what happens when the Phillips kids come back," he said.

"In two weeks, the kids will find you," he said. "After two months, the adults will."

Mr. Rosenberg's new products range in price from 10 cent packages of football stickers to a $7 pack of Topps Stadium Club cards.

He said that unopened 1990 Leaf packs would be selling for about $13 soon.

He plans to carry all major brands except Pro Set. And his store looks absolutely nothing like Memorial Hall Library.

New video store coming to Andover

By Don Staruk

A new video store is opening in Andover Village, at 93 Main St., in the space formerly occupied by Young Fashions.

Bill and Karen Zappala of Peabody hope to open Andover Video around Oct. 1, Mr. Zappala said Tuesday.

"I'm under construction right at the moment," Mr. Zappala said from the store.

The store will sell and rent videos.

Young Fashions, a children's clothing store, closed earlier this summer.

Town woman to open party store

Mary Campbell, a long-time resident of Andover, is opening R.S.V.P. Parties at 133 Main St., North Reading.

The party supply store will specialize in patterned paper plates, paper napkins and table covers, in addition to holiday note paper, gifts and gift wrap.

It will also offer a full line of rental items, including tables, chairs, china, flatware, glasses, linen, tents, dance floors, etc. — just about everything needed to give a party.

All rental equipment can be delivered by calling R.S.V.P. Parties.

Mary and her husband, Jim, also own and operate Jackson Chairs Inc. of Somerville, a major rental company, established in 1915.

I knew it was a great hospital, not by the amount of time I spent there, but by the amount of time I didn't.

Joan Maglio came to New England Memorial Hospital to undergo a gynecological procedure that would treat her barely detectable but dangerous precancerous lesion. She was surprised and pleased at how quickly she was able to leave the hospital and return home.

While Joan's procedure was major, it was not surgery in the conventional sense of the word. Her hysterectomy was done vaginally with the aid of advanced laparoscopic techniques. Dr. Daniel Feinn, Joan's skilled gynecological surgeon, successfully performed the exacting procedure with no large incisions, no post-operative complications, and little, if any, pain. Joan was up and around in two days, and back to herself in no time.

Joan Maglio speaks very highly of the excellent treatment she received from the caring, concerned staff at New England Memorial Hospital. But, thanks to Dr. Feinn, she didn't have much time to get used to it.

Diane Juknavorian, president of the WRC board of directors, presents departing interim director Teresa Beauregard of Andover with a bouquet of flowers at a party in her honor at the home of Florence Toabe of Andover.

WRC appoints new director

Nassrin Farhooody has been named executive director of the Women's Resource Center.

A resident of Worcester, Ms. Farhooody, 33, succeeds Teresa Beauregard of Andover, who served as interim executive director since June.

While promising to continue the many domestic violence programs and services offered by the WRC, Ms. Farhooody will work toward changing social acceptance of family violence and minimizing the number of women being battered.

"I want to get out there to the kids in the schools and change some of their perceptions of girls and their roles," she said. "I want to help girls improve their self-esteem so they realize it's not OK to be hit. I want to teach boys that girls are people, too.

A graduate of Boston University with a bachelor's in sociology, Ms. Farhooody has 12 years of professional experience in human services.

She recently received a master's degree in management of human services from Brandeis University.

Ms. Farhooody comes to the WRC from the Bridge of Central Massachusetts in Northboro, where she served as director of adolescent services.

She also was program supervisor for the Key Program in Framingham.

The WRC is a private, non-profit organization serving battered women and their children in the Merrimack Valley and Southern New Hampshire areas.

Campers to experience colonial life at summer history camp next week

The Museum of American Textile History and the North Andover Historical Society will offer a Colonial Summer History Camp from Monday, Aug. 24, through Friday, Aug. 28.

Campers will experience colonial life through activities such as archaeology, cloth-making, penmanship, paper-making, singing and dancing. They will learn how their ancestors survived with very few material goods, and how they utilized their natural environment without damaging it.

Trained staff from the Museum of American Textile History and the historical society will conduct the daily sessions. Guest artists include Paul Fegan of Fegan's Pocket, who tell true stories and tall tales from the Colonial era.

Camp hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily, and the cost is $150 per camper. Reservations may be made by sending a $75 deposit to the Museum of American Textile History, 800 Massachusetts Avenue, North Andover, 01845. Space is limited to 12 boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 12. For more information, call the museum at 686-0191.

Merrimack's new continuing ed policy benefits working students

Merrimack College's Division of Continuing Education has announced a new policy intended to assist working people obtain academic degrees.

Most companies that reimburse employees for education do so after courses are successfully completed. But, as college courses are paid for when students register, working students must use their own funds for that first course.

Merrimack's new plan will allow students to defer payment until the end of the semester, when the company's educational benefit is paid to the student.

Justine Juarez, dean of Merrimack's Division of Continuing Education, said that one of the greatest obstacles for prospective students is the 'up-front' cost of education. "Those dollars often must be squeezed from family budgets already strained and students sometimes put aside their educational goals in order to provide for families."

Dean Juarez said she believes Merrimack's new policy will allow more students employed full-time to realize their educational aspirations. Companies also benefit, she added, by having better-educated workforces.

Merrimack has been providing continuing education to working students since 1949.

The continuing education division offers degrees in business administration, computer and information sciences, electrical engineering, liberal arts, human services and ministry. Courses may be taken throughout the entire year - fall, winter, spring and summer.

For further information, call continuing education at 837-5101.

MCC offering Pacific studies telecourse

From Japanese and Korean electronic goods, to the American military bases in the Philippines, Asian countries have become major players in the global economic and political arenas. Yet few Americans understand the cultural, economic and political histories of the countries behind these product labels and headlines.

Now college students have the opportunity to learn about one of the principal political and economic centers of the upcoming century with The Pacific Century, a new, interdisciplinary Asian-studies telecourse. The one-semester television course offered for credit by Middlesex Community College, begins Wednesday, Sept. 9.

The course format includes seven on-campus class sessions, held at the Bedford campus on Springs Road and 10 one-hour television programs, which air on Channel 44 beginning Sept. 14. The MCC course will be taught by Professor Julien Farland, Ph.D., a specialist in international studies.

The Pacific Century offers an introductory, college-level survey of the modern history, economics, politics, and cultures of the past 150 years of the Pacific Basin region - from colonialism to nationalism, from military clashes to economic ones. The course also draws upon the experiences and insights of an international panel of scholars and journalists to bring the important people, events and trends of modern Asian-Pacific history to life. The series features an array of visuals, including on-location footage from the Pacific Basin countries, and rare, archival newscasts and photos.

West Middle School gets its long-awaited face lift

By Lisa Boudreau

Crews have been working overtime at West Middle School to get the building ready for the first day of school, Thursday, Sept. 10.

New light fixtures and ceilings have been installed in the building's hallways as well as new interior doors equipped with panic bars, required by law. Nearly one-third of the school's 700 lockers have been replaced, with the remainder to be installed over the next three years, said WMS Principal Sam Campbell.

New plumbing and bathroom fixtures have been installed, the gym floor is in the final stages of being refinished and new bleachers will be installed by October, said Frank Paul, the school's business manager.

According to Mr. Paul, two major projects left to be done include replacing the heating system and renovating the industrial arts room.

Alberto Hidalgo replaces ceiling tiles in one of the hallways at West Middle School.

ANTS? TERMITES?

We send those homewreckers
packing.

They strike five times more homes than fire. And do more damage. Fact is, by the time you see them, the damage has already begun. And left untreated, 9 out of 10 Andover homes will get them. That's why people call us. For 86 years, we've provided safe, effective pest control.

THE REAL ESTATE CORNER

with Jean Fitzgerald &
Pamela Lebowitz

INVESTING IN REAL ESTATE

Many people who play the real estate investment game are doing very well these days. The potential for income, appreciation and possible tax savings makes investment property especially attractive.

Before you dive in, it's important to get professional advice. You may want to start with a personal financial advisor who can help you set your investment goals. Then your Realtor can help you select a competitively priced property that meets these goals; and he or she can answer questions about why a particular property is a solid investment. What features would make it easy to rent? What kind of maintenance expenses are you likely to incur? What will your cash flow be, and how will the tax savings affect the bottom line? While we cannot predict how much a particular property will appreciate, we can give you the history of price trends in our market area.

If there's a move in your future, the real estate specialists at Century 21 Minuteman Realty are ready to serve you. Feel free to visit our office at 2 Elm Square, or phone us at 475-1243.

Understanding Chiropractic

by Mark E. DeLorenzo, D.C.

CHIROPRACTIC BY THE NUMBERS

At any one time, it is estimated that 30 million Americans suffer from back pain. A further look at the numbers shows that a good many of these people are putting themselves in the hands of chiropractors. A recent survey suggest that one American in 20 visits a chiropractor each year. Chiropractors now number about 45,000 and are licensed to practice in all 50 states, where their services are covered by worker's compensation plans. Approximately 30 hospitals in the United States have chiropractors on their staffs. Americans spend some $2.4 billion annually on chiropractic care. In fact, chiropractic ranks behind only medicine and dentistry as the third largest primary health care profession in the Western world.

Many insurance programs now include chiropractic in their coverage. If you have been unable to find relief from your pain, please call us for an appointment at DELORENZO CHIROPRACTIC GROUP, 475-5042. Chiropractic not only restores health, it builds health. Our office is located at 15 Central Street.

P.S. Having first established itself in 1895 in Davenport, Iowa, chiropractic nears its first century of existence.

Jewish residents invited to learn Hebrew in time for Rosh Hashanah

In a free crash course offered at Chabad Lubavitch of Merrimack Valley, beginning Sept. 2, Jewish residents of Merrimack Valley will have the opportunity to learn to read Hebrew in time for Rosh Hashanah. Rabbi Osher Bronstein of Chabad Lubavitch invites the adult Jewish community to take advantage of these five free weekly lessons, offered in conjunction with the National Outreach Program of New York.

According to the National Jewish Outreach Program, more than 45,000 motivated Jewish adults throughout the United States have already learned to read Hebrew through the Hebrew Reading Crash Course. "It is truly remarkable that people who did not know an 'Aleph' from a 'Bet' are able to read the siddur (Hebrew prayer book) in only five weeks," comments Rabbi Bronstein. "Of course, Hebrew is a phonetic language, so it is easier to read than English."

This course is a prelude to a host of free classes and Jewish experiences, including a crash course in Judaism and a beginners prayer service. Through these programs, the current generation of American Jews can educate themselves in the language and traditions of their heritage.

For registration and further information, call 475-1853.

BrookRidge series shows how to 'get out of the rut'

This Sunday's morning service of BrookRidge Community Church begins a three-week series titled "Getting Out of the Rut."

The first topic, anger, aims at understanding the source of our anger and how to respond to the anger of others when we are the targets. If bottling up anger doesn't work and spewing it out doesn't work, what works?

On Aug. 30, doubt will be discussed when you need a miracle and it doesn't happen - and the following week resentment is the topic - when you're trying to forgive but it isn't working.

Recording artist Nancy Tutunjian will be the guest musician this week.

Are we pushing our kids?

If there is a higher percentage of these children in Andover, it may be because of the very make-up of the town and society itself.

"People in Andover are naturally competitive. It's a very competitive town," says Andover's Larry Larsen, a child psychologist. "And parents compete through their kids."

In addition, Andover, like much of America has moved from a rural-agrarian type of society, where the land served as surrogate parent, to today's society where greater structure has filled the parental role, he said.

"The closer people live together the greater the need for structure. The closer people live together and the more competitive (they become), the structure goes up," said Dr. Larsen. Little league, dance recitals, music lessons and all the rest, "are nothing but alternative processing for parenting."

In Andover, parents may and do sign their sons and daughters up for tee-ball at the age of 8, drama and music classes before they enter first grade, soccer at the tender age of 5 and even to schools before they enter kindergarten.

However, the child can begin to associate love with success; conversely one may fear that their parent will no longer love them should they fail. Naturally, if the parent is pushing the child to succeed in something that she or he is not interested in, then the problem is compounded even more. Such a case could prove fertile ground for great pressure or resentment and could ultimately lead the child to give up or withdraw.

"It basically has to do with how much. Intensity has a great deal to do with expectations and expectations are equated, in turn, with love," said Dr. Larsen. For the child it becomes a matter of "What do I have to do to earn my love."

The classic example of the pushed child and the pushy parent has, of course, for quite some time been in sports.

"There's always a certain share around (of pushy parents). Not just in Andover, but everywhere," says Rick Harrison, who has covered sporting events for newspapers and been a Little League coach for 25 years. "There are certain ones who go too far. I've seen them do it even with the 8 and 9 year olds."

"Everyone experiences it," he said. "Every coach has his share of problems."

But things in town may be changing a bit.

"If you asked me about five years ago, I'd say, 'Yes,'" said George Sullivan a coach at the junior high and high school level for 22 years. "At one point I thought there was a certain batch of parents." But today he thinks that the athletes put more pressure on themselves, especially to attain the increasingly rare scholarship.

"I don't find the parents in Andover especially pushy, but there are always exceptions of people jumping down everyone's throat."

Because of today's competition, Mr. Sullivan said that the kid has to really want it him or herself in order to put in the commitment needed. In fact, in many cases, he finds as a coach that he wishes the student would stick to one sport and reach their potential, instead of participating in three.

"But I think there's more pressure put on the (athlete) by the peers and themselves," he said. "I think the parents are more unrealistic as far as knowing the level of competition," and whether their child is capable of getting a scholarship.

However, Mr. Harrison believes that as far as how they react to sports, Andover parents are about the same as parents from most towns and, "probably a little bit better." Which means that the troublesome parents are a very small percentage — but that they are still no small problem.

"I think with someone like (baseball coach) Dave Bettencourt, there's a lot of pressure there. I think you start to see it in the sports where children start early," said Mr. Sullivan. "The expectations get blown out of proportion."

Of course, regardless of all this talk about children's freedom, they most definitely need guidance and direction. "They need it in the form of discipline. They need plenty of love, plenty of acceptance... and they also need to know that the world is predictable," said Dr. Larsen.

"Parents get them into things to meet people. Sometimes you have to be pushed into it and you find you like it. At the younger levels it's a trial period," said Mr. Sullivan.

"My parents signed me up for soccer camp... We didn't even talk about it ahead of time. He just signed me up," said 13-year-old Andy Parker. "But I liked it in the end. My dad was right."

Parents just need to be careful that the gentle nudge doesn't become the push that will lead to fights with their teens down the road.

One possible way to succeed may be to offer the child a taste of everything and have them pick what they find most enjoyable. It is in one of these chosen fields that they can excel and will be most happy, says Dr. Larsen. He calls it his "tuning fork" principle.

"I tell the kids, 'There is a tuning fork inside each of us. The happiest people in the world have their tuning fork vibrating inside as well as outside.'"

"What you have to use is common sense," said Dr. Larsen says to parents. "See where the child wants to go and then cultivate it. It's like a bonsai tree."

Greg Murphy, of Tiffany Lane and a private middle school student, offers an example.

"My mom's always trying to sign me up for camps and teen corps things. But I think they're pretty lame," he said. Instead, Greg takes weekly drum lessons, a craft he enjoys. The parent can suggest possible avenues for advancement and challenge, but ultimately the child will have to choose, either through the actual concrete choice or the mental deci-

South School principal switched to Sanborn

croft Elementary, will begin her second year this fall and Charles Friel, West Elementary assistant principal since 1987, will take over as the school's principal in September, replacing Jack Coyle, who retired in June. Denise Littlefield, an administrator from Methuen, was hired last week by the School Committee to replace Mr. Friel. She is the wife of the Methuen School Superintendent, Phillip Littlefield.

School Committee members voiced unanimous support for the superintendent's decision at the Tuesday meeting on Aug. 11. Bill Huston was absent.

"It does not benefit the system when there are teams of entrenched educators who have been at their posts so long that political atmospheres develop in their buildings," said member Christopher Outwin.

"The school system will be tested as it adjusts, but it will be healthier," he said.

Ms. Reitman was hired to be the South School principal seven years ago. She said she has mixed feelings about leaving the South School community. Ms. Reitman and her husband, Bruce, live in Boxford, with their 7-week-old daughter, Katherine.

"It was a surprise. I have great feelings of loss. The people at South feel like an extended family to me. I was looking forward to sharing the joy of our newly adopted daughter with all my friends there," Ms. Reitman said.

She said she is looking forward to developing the same bonds with the Sanborn staff, students and parents.

The newest member to the system's elementary administration will be chosen to replace Ms. Reitman at South School by Sept. 1, Dr. McQuillan said.

Madhu Sridhar, president of the South School Parent Teacher Organization, said South School's loss is Sanborn's gain.

"I have a deep appreciation for Jade and the rapport she has with the students, staff and parents. I have talked with her on many occasions and I agree with her philosophy of education. At the same time, I do support the superintendent's commitment to rotating staff," she said.

Ms. Sridhar also believes the school system will benefit once Dr. McQuillan and the School Committee have drafted a plan to rotate all school personnel.

"Each new person brings strengths that are unique to him or her. We will have four new teachers at South this fall (due to retirements) and the secretary will also be new, so one of my major concerns is that an administrator is on board by the start of the school year," said Ms. Sridhar, who has a daughter in the second grade at South and a son who will attend kindergarten there in September 1993.

Ms. Sridhar has volunteered to serve on the South School principal search committee. Anyone who is interested in serving on this committee should contact the superintendent's office.

Beth Orlando, who taught second grade at South for three years before transferring to Sanborn last year, said she is looking forward to working with Ms. Reitman again. But she is cautious about supporting a system-wide rotation of staff unless it is carefully planned.

"I suppose it has its good points, but it takes time to get to know the team of teachers you work with and develop a camaraderie that makes for a healthy work environment," she said.

"New people bring new ideas and new ways of thinking with them. As long as people aren't switching too often, I think it can be really productive," Ms. Orlando said.

School committee member Christopher Outwin

Delores Pelc, a 17-year veteran of the Andover schools, agrees with Ms. Orlando. Ms. Pelc has taught third grade at South for the past five years. Before that, she taught at Bancroft and the former Doherty Elementary.

"I would like to see staff stay together at least five or six years," she said.

"I'd be in favor of it because I think you grow professionally when you work in different buildings, under different administrators and with new teachers," Ms. Pelc said.

Ms. Woods said she is confident that Ms. Reitman will make the transition to Sanborn very easily. The two will be working together during the weeks before the opening of school on Thursday, Sept. 10.

For the past 18 months he has run the city's auto theft unit, which has reduced auto theft in Lawrence 42 percent. The unit was established in March 1991 when the city received a 3-year, $480,000 grant to fight auto theft and insurance fraud.

Sgt. Deyermund and the other three members of the auto theft unit, Detectives Wayne Taylor, Jose Linares and Tom Murphy, have been featured on national TV news shows such as 48 Hours and Inside Edition.

"When I first heard (the chief) was looking for a sergeant to head up the auto theft unit, I thought to myself 'What fool would volunteer for that job, knowing Lawrence was number one in the country in stolen cars. As it turned out, I was the junior ranking sergeant and I got the job by default,'" he said.

Sgt. Deyermund's original goal was to reduce the stolen car rate by 10 to 15 percent the first year. The unit surpassed that goal, reducing the rate 34 percent the first year. It's now down 42 percent, he said.

Sgt. Deyermund believes most people don't view auto theft as a violent crime.

"Tell that to the people living on the streets where these kids drive by in stolen cars at 80 mph, trying to provoke the police into chasing them, or to the parents of children hit by stolen cars," he said.

"We've had kids in stolen cars 'doing donuts' in front of the station, trying to get us to chase them — and they purposely ram the front of cruisers to set off the air bags," he said.

He believes police today are in a "no win" situation. When they do chase suspected car thieves they are criticized for endangering the public and, if they don't pursue alleged criminals, then they aren't doing their job.

"You're damned if you do and damned if you don't. In most cases you're going to be held accountable for a decision you'll have to make in a split second by a lawyer in court who has had six months to analyze it," he said.

"What really burns me up are the newspaper articles saying 'the kid was just starting to turn his life around.' That really kills me," Sgt. Deyermund said.

The prevalence of crime and auto theft has begun a vicious circle of events that have changed the city's downtown from a hustling business center to a ghost of its former self, and well-kept neighborhoods into rows of burned-out, abandoned buildings, he said.

"People don't want to come to Lawrence to shop anymore because they are afraid to leave their cars here. People don't want to live here because of all the crime and gangs. What has happened is that people stop shopping here and those who once lived here move out. Slowly, but surely the city just dies," he said.

The family business

The last thing Sgt. Deyermund, 46, a 1964 graduate of Andover High School, wanted to be when he grew up was a police officer. His grandfather, father and uncle were policemen in Andover. His uncle used to be an officer in North Andover, and he has three

Wingate nursing home is open for business

that is paying through private resources."

A semiprivate room costs $175 a day at Wingate and a private room costs $200.

"Our rates are competitive with the other nursing facilities in town and in North Andover," said Bill Ring, facility administrator.

The facility has garnered a "good amount of interest" already, according to Willie Sclarsic, vice president of Wingate, and many people are requesting tours.

The 123 residents will be attended to by 140 staff, a mixture of full and part time, once the facility is full. Initial staff have already been hired and employees will be added as residents move in.

"We're taking applications for jobs and residents," said Mr. Sclarsic.

Interested parties can contact Joan Cassidy, director of admissions.

"Andover" design

Wingate was designed by Mr. Sclarsic, who is also an architect, and Manuel de Santaren, an architect and interior designer from Boston.

"It's beautiful, but functional for its intended use," Mr. Schuster said.

The design of the building has no technical style, but is what Mr. Sclarsic called "Andover."

Officials went around Andover and took pictures of buildings like the Old Town Hall, Memorial Library and at Phillips Academy and tried to incorporate similar designs in Wingate such as the red brick and large windows wrapped in concrete.

This was Mr. de Santaren's first work with a health care facility, as he works mostly with residential and hotel design. One challenge for him was working with the limited materials allowed by state codes for health care facilities while also trying to make the building comfortable.

The building is three levels, ground, first and second floors, and is set up for 41 residents on each floor. Although a nursing home is a health care facility, Wingate is designed more like a hotel, Mr. Schuster said, with public spaces, bedrooms like hotels and service in the "back of the house."

Food and laundry services are run through service corridors, and the elevators have rear doors onto those corridors so service employees are not pushing laundry or dirty dishes through resident areas.

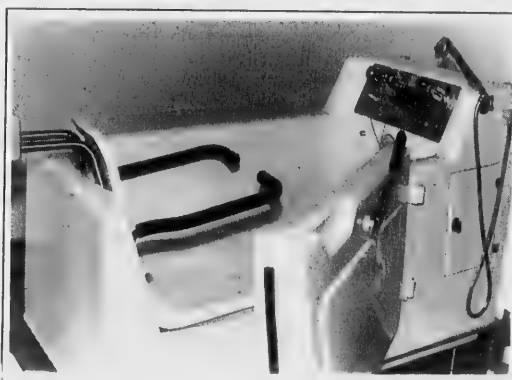

The main lobby is open to the ceiling and is the nucleus of the building.

A two sided salt-water fish tank which greets visitors in the lobby also can be viewed from the admissions office. The reproduction English and Colonial style antique furniture includes Queen Anne wing chairs in a tapestry fabric and Chippendale pieces, "like you would find in some of the homes in Andover," according to Mr. de Santaren.

Above, many of the rooms at Wingate will accommodate two residents. Right, the staff is prepared to meet residents' needs, and the facility is equipped with customized equipment like this whirlpool bath.

Matthew Sapienza

The main dining room, just off the lobby, is carpeted, has chintz floral curtains and English reproduction wood furniture "so that you feel like your going into a very elegant dining room of an eastern seaboard country club," Mr. de Santaren said.

Residents at Wingate will need some level of medical care and will be attended to by a physician. For that reason, the basic house diet is something most residents can tolerate, with individual meals and supplements for those who need them. A registered dietitian is in charge of planning meals.

To promote social interaction, there is a lounge outside the dining room for residents to gather and talk before meals.

"We treat food as a very serious thing here because that becomes the highlight of people's day," Mr. Sclarsic said.

Most floors that are not carpeted, including the hallways and bedrooms, are seamless, skid-free vinyl for safety and easy cleaning.

The facility has nine private rooms, including three individual isolation rooms, with private showers. The rest of the rooms are semi private with two beds each. They have toilets, but bathing facilities are in a common area.

"Bathing is one of the most dangerous activities because that's where all the falls occur," Mr. Sclarsic said.

The showers have special chairs for showering and a high tech bathtub has a side that opens so residents can enter from the side rather than over the edge. It also has a lift to help get residents in and out.

The nursing station is equipped with the latest technology for monitoring rooms and with two way communication so a nurse can talk to a patient in a room without leaving the station. The day room has television, a stereo system, VCR and CD player.

The same equipment is available in the activity room on the second floor, where it is accompanied by a 54-inch television screen.

A patio outside the activity room is equipped with umbrellas, speakers for music and chairs for residents to sit outside and relax. Back inside, there is a large sitting area on the balcony overlooking the main lobby which is left free of furniture so residents can pull wheelchairs out to sit in the open space.

The idea of all the nicely decorated shared space is to bring a residential feeling to the nursing home, according to Mr. Schuster and Mr. de Santaren.

"Nursing home is two words," according to Mr. Schuster. "We try to push the home side."

"I felt that we needed to make this as residential as possible in the decoration, so that people don't feel they are coming into an institution," Mr. de Santaren said.

No day health

No adult day health program will be available as originally planned. The costs of providing day health, and the unwillingness of the state to pay for it, led to the service being taken out of the plans for this facility and discontinued at the company's two other homes.

"The state doesn't want to reimburse that," Mr. Sclarsic said.

Instead, a rehabilitation room was put in with an area for speech therapy, a practice staircase and a kitchen and bathroom for residents to learn how to get along in a home that was not built for handicapped use, so they might eventually be able to go home and get by on their own.

"We teach them how to work in a kitchen that is not designed for people with a handicap," Mr. Sclarsic said.

It also has a hydrotherapy room with a whirlpool-type bath.

A day-care center on the ground level is for employees' children, but will also be used for intergenerational programs involving the residents.

"The center will serve the staff of the facility and possibly the staff of our facility in Reading as well," Mr. Sclarsic said.

A hairdresser will be available in a ground floor beauty parlor.

The nursing home has an emergency generator to support all life-saving equipment in the event of a power outage.

The trains which run on the rail line right behind the building are barely noticeable, according to Mr. Sclarsic.

"If you were walking down the hall and a train went by you would not know a train went by," he said.

The walls and windows are insulated against the sound and the soils packed around a special foundation absorb the vibration. Rather than a nuisance, the trains will actually be more a source of entertainment for residents who will enjoy watching them pass, Mr. Sclarsic predicted.

Seeking golden retriever

The only thing still needed is a sort of mascot to hang out with the residents and to greet visitors, so Wingate is interviewing for a "house dog."

Margo Brunelli, director of quality assurance for the three Wingate nursing homes, is currently interviewing for three golden retrievers, one for each of the homes.

"Elderly people respond very well to animals," Ms. Brunelli said. "There is no better therapy than dogs with people."

The successful dogs will be trained to be protective of residents and not to be intrusive at the home.

Catching career criminals

...cousins who are state policemen.

"I realized early that this occupation leaves you little free time. You're either working your shift or you're trying to make a few extra dollars by picking up detail work," Sgt. Deyermond said.

Now that he's head of the auto theft unit his hours are less irregular and he can spend more time with his wife, Andrea, and their two daughters, 18-month-old Meagan and 4-month-old Brianna.

After high school he attended Boston University for a semester, but city life and commuting didn't suit him. He moved to Maryland to attend community college for two years. His eyes were opened to new cultures and people in a way they never would have been in Andover, he said.

"The schools were still segregated at that time and I ended up substitute-teaching at an all-black high school there," he said.

"I learned a lot about people just being people, regardless of their skin color or where they came from. Unfamiliarity brings out a lot of questions about people. If you don't take the time to find the answers, the distance between you and them keeps growing," Sgt. Deyermond said.

While in school he worked several part-time jobs in one of southern Maryland's many casinos. He did a little of everything, including emptying slot machines. After two years he transferred to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and was there for a year before he took a semester off to drive across the country. Because he wasn't in school, he was no longer exempt from the draft. He received his draft notice Christmas Eve day 1968, and shipped out for training in January 1969.

"I was at infantry school in the south when I got word my brother (Warren "Buster") had been killed in Vietnam. Because it was an undeclared war, if someone in your family got killed you didn't have to go overseas," he said.

After his two years in the Army, he returned to the area and received a bachelor's degree in education from Northern Essex Community College. Teaching jobs were scarce so he took a job as a respiratory therapist at Hale Hospital in Haverhill. He did that and taught respiratory clinical classes at NECC for several years, but in 1978 he decided to make a career change.

"Respiratory illness are very debilitating. After a while I got tired of seeing people slowly wasting away," Sgt. Deyermond said.

He took both the state-police and civil-service exams. He had originally wanted to be a state trooper, but a job on the Lawrence department opened up first.

First day on the job

"My first day on the job was a mixture of excitement and terror. I walked in and asked the officer in charge what I should do. He pointed to a room and told me to sit down. I walked in and there were about 20 police officers staring at me. I went to take a seat and this one guy growled at me. 'Who told you to sit down?' That was all I needed. I was ready to walk out the door," he said.

Sgt. Deyermond was assigned to ride with a veteran officer and for six months he learned on the job.

"They gave me a revolver and a badge and that was it. At that time there was a six-month waiting list to get into the academy. I was just lucky that I got to ride with an older officer who helped me learn the ropes. Some new guys rode with partners who wouldn't let them drive, wouldn't let them answer the radio or do anything," he said.

The first solo assignment he had was a walking beat on Essex and Common Streets.

Changes seen through a policeman's eyes

Traffic and parking enforcement and giving directions took up a lot of Sgt. Deyermond's time when he began his walking beat. Because he didn't know many people in the city, he always stopped into stores to greet the shopkeeper and introduce himself.

Since that time he has seen the number of stores and shoppers slowly diminish.

"When I was a kid one of the best things about Christmas was going to Lawrence to do our shopping. I can remember when there used to be two officers directing the traffic at Christmas time," he said.

Sgt. Deyermond said his attitude and approach to law enforcement have changed since he joined the force 14 years ago.

"I was just like all the rest of the young guys when I got on the force. I wanted to right every wrong and stop every jerk who went through a red light.

"It doesn't take long, especially over here, to realize that you use up a lot of energy and things aren't any different, than when you started," he said.

Sgt. Deyermond said he doesn't like being so cynical, but "the system makes it difficult" to do his job.

"The court system is overburdened and most of the cases are resolved in the court's hallways. In the last five years, with the hundreds of cases I've been involved in, I've gone to court to testify less than five times," he said.

According to Sgt. Deyermond, Lawrence District Court is the third busiest court in the state. The number of cases bogs down the system and expediency is valued over justice, he believes.

"Everyone loses. I lose out because of the time I've spent on the case. You, the victim, lose out because you don't see justice done," he said.

One example is a 20-year-old "career" car thief who was released last week after serving only six months of a 10-year sentence.

"We weren't getting any satisfaction from the courts so, because of his record, we had (an Essex County) Grand Jury investigation, which indicted him," he said.

The man was held at the Essex County House of Correction in Middleton for six months while he waited for his trial. The trial was last week and the judge sentenced him to 10 years at the Massachusetts Correctional Institute in Concord with six months of the sentence served and the rest suspended while he was on probation for three years.

"The six months he spent in Middleton was counted as time served, so he never went to Concord. The only good thing is that he's on probation and the next time we catch him he'll have to serve the 10 years at Concord. I know him and the way he operates. It won't be long," Sgt. Deyermond said.

Car thieves getting younger each day

"Any juvenile will tell you they can get away with just about murder. That's part of why we see an exploding car-theft rate. They never should have gotten rid of the training schools (juvenile detention halls)," he said.

Sgt. Deyermond and other Lawrence officers have arrested car thieves as young as 8 and 9. Some, he said, can't even see over the steering wheel so they sit on rolled-up car mats or milk crates. Some work in pairs, he said. One steers and the other operates the gas and brake pedals.

"We arrested one kid and when I asked him how old he was he told me 16. I brought him down to the station to book him and asked his age again. He told me he was 17. When I asked him why he lied, he said, 'Everyone knows when you get arrested in Lawrence you should say you're 16 and the police will call your mother to come pick you up.' How do you battle that mentality? These car thieves are cult heroes to the kids," he said.

Gangs like the South Side Kings, LTS (License to Steal), and ESP (Every Sucker's Problem) are organized and advertise their exploits, Sgt. Deyermond said.

"We've put hundreds of these kids in jail. They aren't in school. They don't work and they hang out all day and all night. They have flashy clothes and jewelry and they're always driving a different car. They're idolized," he said.

Making a difference

Sgt. Deyermond said a different approach was needed to reduce auto theft. There are two types of thieves and sometimes they cross paths, he said. There are the kids stealing cars for the thrill of a chase and there are those who steal cars and strip them for parts.

"We know all the players and where they live. We wait until we can get arrest warrants, then we go to where they live. That way we avoid dangerous car chases and we get better results, he said.

The majority of the repetitive car thieves know Sgt. Deyermond and the other three detectives in the auto theft unit by name. The gangs leave graffiti messages and obscenities for them all across the city and have even left notes for them in the stolen cars they abandon, he said.

Burnout

"The days when you could ride the job out 'til you turned 65 are long gone. This isn't a job for an older man. After a while you feel used up and hollow. I take my hat off to these young guys who are still willing to joining the force. With all they have to face on the street and the constant threat of being laid off, they have it really tough," he said.

The night shift

Even though the auto theft unit's official hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Sgt. Deyermond finds he and his colleagues put in many hours and rotate working nights.

"The car thieves don't work 9 to 5, so we can't," he said.

"They are like mushrooms. They all come out at night. I used to work the midnight shift and it's like high noon on some streets. The drug dealers, the prostitutes — they're all out doing their thing. As much as I hated the hours, I loved the shift for its entertainment value," he said.

Future of his department

Lawrence recently hired a private firm to analyze the city's organization. Part of its recommendation is to do away with the auto theft unit, even though enough grant money remains to fund 18 more months of work. When the grant runs out the unit was to be funded by money collected through fines and violations, he said.

If the recommendation goes forward, Sgt. Deyermond would be assigned to investigating property crimes as well as car theft.

"I would hope the public would be outraged that this is being considered. The chief (Allen Cole) doesn't support the recommendation and has stood behind us all the way," he said.

"I would hope that the amount of work we've done and the results we've had would speak for us. But sometimes a job well done is its only reward," Sgt. Deyermond said.

Listen to these kids

Check out the CVS parking lot on a school morning, maybe 7:20-ish. At one time there may be a dozen to two dozen middle-school-age students, talking, smoking, fooling around, sometimes checking out the parked cars in the lot.

Check around the gazebo in The Park on Bartlet and Chestnut streets on a week night. During the summer, there are older teens there, sitting around, talking, smoking.

Now ask kids, ages 12 through young adult: Is there enough for you to do in Andover? Most likely the answer will be no.

We have noticed that the number of minor incidents in the police log have increased. Students are defacing public property; they are stealing hood ornaments; and they are loitering in areas where they don't belong. In addition, they are sometimes rude and angry when confronted about a problem.

What's the problem? We believe that kids feel abandoned. Their parents, if they have two, are both working, the house is often empty and adults are preoccupied with problems: the economy, the cost to educate their children, making ends meet, health needs and so on.

Some years ago, a group tried to open a teen center in Andover; it never got off the ground. At a meeting Monday night hosted by Peg Campbell, co-director of the town's Department of Community Services, and attended by Tim Thomas, principal of Andover High School, parents said they want the town and the schools to organize more activities for teen-agers this year. They discussed ideas for new programs and lent support to those their children have attended in the past.

It is time to listen to young people. We need to let them know we hear them, that we care and that we are prepared to do something about their concerns and needs.

We suggest putting together a commission made up of students, teachers, parents, clergy and others to address the needs of kids. That would be a step in the right direction. It also would send a message to young people: We hear you, your needs are real, you are important to us.

Townsmen interns say farewell

(Editor's note: This summer the Townsman has had two student interns: Neil Fater and Betsy Frankenberger. We asked them to write about their experiences as interns, to share with our readers as well as new interns.)

Hot dogs. These, and these alone, are the key to being a successful intern. When it comes to lunch, if you are going to have any at all, the hot dog is a must; although an occasional steak and cheese will do fine in a pinch. Anything that clogs the arteries, opens the mind, and gets the creative juices flowing (creative juices are 78 percent lard, for the unaware) is acceptable. Yet, only a hot dog can bring you back to the 1940 newsroom days of a typewriter, a felt hat, and a goofy little "press" card where the feather should be. Lunch will be your greatest test as an intern. There will be many temptors. Do not give in to those preaching the bible of "dirt food."

Other than lunch, the most basic intern need is the need to pick which days one is to work. Not being able to come in every day (because you need to earn some money the rest of the time) will be your greatest handicap. If you really care about your stories, or even just one or two particular articles, you will have to come in extra days or stay late a couple of nights and set up interviews on the weekend. But, again, this is only if you are truly committed to getting all the angles, or covering a particular aspect in depth. If you just want to put in your time and leave, certainly no one is going to complain.

Which brings me to the next point - the amount and type of work you will do, both of which you will have a "Well, at least you're getting good experience," says cousin Jake, in regard to my non-paying internship at the Andover Townsman for the summer of 1992.

"Experience," I repeat inside of my head, realizing that what he's trying to tell me is "Better luck next summer."

This E-word has adopted a partially negative connotation in a world where money measures success. The new meaning of the word displays ideas of absence: The lack of payment is compensated by the clichéd E.

It is unfortunate that the significance of the E-word is declining. After all, E should be everything to a person in his or her lifetime; it is the basis on how one learns, functions and grows. It is with regret that I have to nod in agreement to those who feel my position at the Townsman is insignificant because a dollar symbol cannot be attached to it.

True, money is an element to consider. I often catch myself complaining about certain expenses, including the rising cost of attending NYU and the cash needed to fulfill my favorite pastime: going to the movies. But if money were the most important issue in choosing a job this summer, I wouldn't be here at all; I'd be working six nights a week as a cocktail waitress on Bleecker Street in lower Manhattan.

Why can't recycling be simple?

Editor, Townsman:

For sometime now, the town of Andover has participated in a limited recycling program. We knew from the beginning that it would be difficult for us to comply; because of business we are sometimes not at home on the days that our paper and glass are collected.

An even bigger problem, however, is having only the third Saturday of the month available to us to drop off cans and plastic. Because we do not live in Andover on the weekends (and the very few that we are here seem never to be the third Saturday of a month), and because we are committed to recycling, we now have cans and plastic in our garage up to our double chins and receding hairs.

Why can't recycling in Andover be as simple as it looks to be in so many other places? We travel by car on business to small towns and big cities from the whole eastern seaboard to the Mississippi River and from Maine to Georgia to Ohio, etc.

We have seen tiny towns as well as big communities all set up so that the citizens can bring and deposit their recyclables at their convenience. There are large collection "dumpsters," designed just for recycling, in shopping center parking lots (sometimes sponsored by the largest store in the center).

In the tiniest towns, where one is challenged to identify a formal "main street," there is a small building with its doors open daily so that townspeople may deliver their recyclables at any time. In small villages on lakes in Maine, the regular trash collector (whose workload increases considerably with the opening of the summer

Shawsheen PTO says vote for the second teacher a good sign for all

Editor, Townsman:

On behalf of the Shawsheen School PTO, we would like to express our full appreciation to the school committee for their support of the superintendent's recommendation for the second grade at Shawsheen School. The school has been successful in providing a means to alleviate overcrowding in the neighborhood schools. The vote in favor of two second-grade teachers will let all parents know that the school continues to be part of the committee's long-range efforts. We would also like to express our thanks to parents from all the schools, not just at Shawsheen, who spoke in support of the superintendent's recommendation.

camp), collects the separated glass, paper, plastic and cans along with the other trash every summer week ...for the same (low) price. No sweat. No big deal for the towns in Maine.

If Andover must have trash pickup, why can't it include plastic and cans as well?

Municipal group thanks Rep. Coon for voting to override vetoes

Editor, Townsman:

On behalf of local officials across the state, the Massachusetts Municipal Association wishes to express its appreciation for Rep. Gary Coon's support last week in voting to override all three of the governor's education-aid and lottery-aid vetoes.

As you know, local government is hurting. The governor's action in vetoing $185 million in education funds and $23 million in lottery revenues for cities and towns neglected to recognize that pain. By voting to overturn these vetoes, Rep. Gary Coon took a strong stand in favor of providing immediate assistance to municipalities and showed a deeper understanding of the crisis in municipal finance.

Release of the education and lottery funds to towns and cities will have a measurable benefit for all the citizens of Massachusetts, from school children to seniors, who rely on public schools, police and fire protection, drivable roads and the whole range of local services.

Of course, towns and cities are still facing very serious fiscal problems. But in the short-term, the budget that the Legislature approved for FY 1993 begins to reinvest in our communities. The key to any long-range solution is adherence to the voter-backed premise of equitably sharing "state" tax revenues with cities and towns. We look forward to working with the Legislature and the governor to achieve that type of stability in revenue sharing, a step that would re-forge a lasting state-local partnership that benefits both levels of government.

In the meantime, our thanks to Rep. Gary Coon for supporting the veto overrides last week.

great deal of control over. As an intern, there is a certain amount of really boring things you will have to do. But, overall, there is room to do, not everything, but a decent amount of things you may be considering.

With this in mind, you can probably see that one of the best moves you can make is to come up with stories of your own. In other words, if you haven't been considering anything, do so. Besides, the typical intern is usually in college and thus may come up with different ideas and lend a unique perspective. Or perhaps just have a lack of perspective. But either way, to state the obvious, the time goes faster and the job is more enjoyable if you are writing about things that interest you.

As you will quickly discover, what the Townsman believes will interest its readers is entirely different than what a daily newspaper would. As a weekly small-town paper, the Townsman does a great deal of feature stories about people, places and events in town. The paper's goal is to bring the community closer together and by informing people in the area about one another this goal can be reached. And, of course, the people in town do want to know about one another, even if half the time it is just because they're nosier than Pinocchio.

Andover is an old town with a great deal of tradition, but with a lot of old, tired ways that may need to be changed, or at least looked into by someone who isn't satisfied with the status quo. You'll find a lot of people who come to town, or even who have grown up in town, who are treated differently and who are dissatisfied with the way things are, not so much at the selectmen's meetings, but at PTO and other meetings of Andover people. There is certainly, as in any town, discrimination and mistreatment, whether it be racial or socio-economic and perhaps this exposure can help change things and thus help bring the community closer together, as well.

Again, it all depends on what interests you. Certainly people enjoy a profile, and if that is what interests you then that's great. But if you want to do more, don't be limited. If you are interested in investigative journalism, there are some ways in which a weekly can do more than a daily newspaper. Because the reporters at a daily are concentrating on covering the breaking news every day, they rarely get to do an in-depth look at any issue.

OK, that's it. Granted, you were probably expecting a little intern note telling you how great it is here to be part of a paper - but that's all a little too sappy for me, not in my style, and overall just plain too much like something Walt Disney would write or something that you'd see at the end of a Dougie Houser episode. (Speaking of which, for a supposed genius he types awfully slow, doesn't he? I mean, I've noticed it, and I've only seen the show about once in my life.) Oh, by the way, a sentence like the one you just read is about four times the size of the typical newspaper sentence.

Anyway, I'm sorry I got so preachy, and I'm sorry if it was kind of annoying at times. Basically, I just want you to realize that even as a lowly intern, one level above that of the common ringworm, you can still get a lot accomplished, hopefully without even affecting people's digestion. Hey, all of us have dreams and goals.

Confused? Well if you ever are, either by this or anything you have to do, be sure (as you've probably been told since your first day of school) to ask questions. Not only will it save you a great deal of time, but whoever answers your question will probably be grateful to talk to a human for a minute and be torn away from the computer that's damaging his or her eyes and softening his or her mind. Perry, Jack, Don, Lisa, or whoever else all have a great deal of experience in dealing either with the town or with newspaper writing in general. Not only will they be able to point you in the right direction and give you some names to call and background to draw on, but they, like any individual, might be able to see a worthwhile angle in the story that you had overlooked.

Well, that's about everything. Time for me to get down off my pulpit, wish you good luck and go on my way. It's almost lunch time, and I need a hot dog.

Editor, Townsmen:

The 1991-92 school year saw many changes for West Middle School. The arrival of a new principal, Dr. Samuel Campbell, brought an atmosphere of openness, a desire for more parental involvement and, most importantly, an astute and compassionate attitude towards the middle-school-age child. Also, the school was the center of public attention when a group of parents and teachers worked towards and attained many resolutions to the sad state of the long-neglected school building, with the help of school and town administrators.

In the spirit of the atmosphere of change and progress, West Middle School has formed a new Parents' Advisory Council (P.A.C.) with newly written bylaws, executive board and general board. Executive board officers are Janice Barch, president; Terry Cutting, vice president; and Ann Muller, treasurer. The principle objectives of

A good adjective to describe the internship is "priceless." What I have learned at the Townsmen is how to work in an area of interest to me: I interviewed and photographed subjects, wrote weekly feature articles, and generated news from press releases.

I was even given the opportunity to start the Townsmen's first summertime events calendar and have my views printed in an editorial column.

Perhaps the greatest feature of the internship was working with the great staff at the Townsmen. Because the things one learns in the microcosm of the classroom cannot always be applied to what goes on in the virtual world outside, I am thankful to have learned the function of the media in a place where the staff — not the textbooks — has educated me.

In my opinion, that's what experience is all about.

Your Dental HEALTH

by Richard D. Hoppood, D.M.D.

THE TOOTH GAP

A recent survey of the American public indicates that there are some fairly wide gaps between what the public knows and what the public actually does. For instance, 80 percent of those polled said that flossing was important for maintaining healthy teeth, yet less than half (36 percent) of that percentage actually flosses on a daily basis. While nearly everyone agrees that regular dental checkups are also important, only half of all Americans adhere to a twice-yearly checkup schedule. Almost a third (29 percent) of all Americans do not visit the dentist at all. For its part, the dental profession has developed materials and procedures that have the potential to render cavities a thing of the past. It is up to the public to avail itself of this opportunity.

You can't escape it. Even with all the helpful products on the market today, brushing and flossing still remain at the cornerstone of good home oral hygiene. Regular checkups are an important part, also, in keeping your teeth and gums their healthiest. I am currently welcoming new patients at my modern, friendly offices at 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133, with easy access off Rt 93, where I have office hours Mon & Thurs 10-8, Tues & Friday 8-6, and by appointment. Phone: 475-2431

P.S. An electric toothbrush does not take the place of dental floss.

"Happy trails to you..."

Residents stroll down Smolak Farm's trails

By Mary Katis

A walk in the country can be an enjoyable part of the summer experience.

Michael Smolak of Smolak Farm, located at Dale and South Bradford streets, North Andover, has invited the public to enjoy the farm's walking trails.

There are five trails that are well-marked for easy visibility. Each trail is marked with a colorful ribbon to indicate the path's direction and size. A map at the farm stand describes the length of each path and geography of the farm.

"Walking on the grass or dirt is much easier on your feet than walking on asphalt," said Mr. Smolak. "I saw the people walking around the Common and decided to offer another place to walk."

The five trails are composed of two, half-mile trails; two, one-mile trails; and one, 2 1/2-mile trail.

The shorter trails are mostly flat and easy to walk. The longer ones have hills, making them a little more difficult, but they offer good exercise and great landscapes.

When Mr. Smolak walks around the farm or looks out at the fields, he only sees work to be done.

The shorter trails stretch through the peach and cherry orchards and give the walker an opportunity to see open fields.

"Walking on the Common gets boring, but on the farm the apples, pumpkins and peaches are changing every week," Mr. Smolak said.

Rosemary Bazin and Riota Stella, both North Andover residents, like to walk and tried the newly opened trails.

"I think it's nice they did this, for all the people to have a chance to do trails," said Ms. Bazin. "The Common and Atkinson loop get boring going around the track. After we walk, then we usually get Dunkin' Donuts coffee."

Parts of the Smolak homestead are almost 300 years old. Martin and Magdalene Smolak purchased the farm in 1927 and it still belongs to the family.

Henry and Helen Smolak continued the dairy and truck farming plus caring for the peach orchard and 200 apple trees. The third and fourth generations of the family have over 3,000 fruit trees and 12,000 Christmas trees on the farm.

In 1982 over 100 of the 160 acres were preserved by the state's Agricultural Preservation Program.

A lot of people helped the Smolak family when they settled in New England. Harvey Turner who had orchards on South Main Street, Andover, was like a surrogate father to Henry Smolak, Michael's father. George Barker was supportive when Henry Smolak died suddenly at age 51. When Michael Smolak took over the management of the farm, he didn't want to compete with local farmers who had helped the family.

"No one was planting Christmas trees and the orchards could be increased," said Mr. Smolak. "Pick-your-own-apples was started and then the farm stand with my sister, Eileen Mauch, baking her famous apple pies. When the other farms are closing down in the fall, we are hiring more staff. The farm is a four-season farm."

Mr. Smolak is keenly aware of his stewardship until he passes it along to the next generation.

Geon Yves Bronner of Partridge Lane, Boxford, is from Paris and living here on a house exchange. He was told by the exchange family to take his family to Smolak farm. The walking trails were very interesting to him.

After he studied the trail map, he said, "In Europe, you can't go walking in the forest because it is private."

Mr. Smolak saw the Nashoba Valley Winery in Bolton and discovered the innovative trails marked for walking paths.

He felt that the North Andover farm land could offer similar trails. All the farm decisions are finalized with family meetings that include nieces and nephews.

Carol Smolak Leary's sons, Dan and Jack, and her daughter, Katie, are helping this summer and Eileen Smo-lak Mauck's daughters, Carrie and Laurie, are helping at the farm stand.

"I told Dan (Leary) if he wants to run a farm, he should get a business education to learn the farming business and how to manage people," Mr. Smolak said. Dan is 15 years old, a high school student, and likes to spend a lot of time on the farm.

Matt Dustin, the farm manager, said, "A lot of people are looking for a safe place to walk. The walking trails will stay marked for cross-country skiing. Something will always be different with various stages of growth in the fields and the different seasons. Trails end at the starting place, which is either the white barn or the farm stand."

"If you walk early in the morning, you will have a chance to see the wildlife: pheasant, deer, fox, hawk, woodchuck, sparrow, goldfinch, red-winged blackbird and bluebird," he said. "The bluebirds have a nest behind the barn."

Steve Smolak, who does carpentry work on the farm and recently completed the frame for the outside eating area, thought long and hard about the trails and what was most important. Would it be the exercise, or the beauty of the farm land, or watching the fruit trees yield fruit?

"The trails will be quiet," he said.

The following events are planned at Smolak Farm:

Aug. 30: First Annual Peach Festival - Come and celebrate the summer's end with your family. Activities include pick-your-own peaches, hayrides, face painting by North Andover Youth Services, work by local artists and artisans, music and more.

Sept. 19-20: Day in the Country Apple Festival - The fifth annual festival is co-sponsored with the North Andover Historical Society. Events include apple picking, hayrides and crafts.

Oct. 10-11: The Farmer's Ball - A traditional, old-fashioned farm ball will be held in the barn's hayloft. Activities will include a hoedown with a bluegrass band, dancing and refreshments. Tickets will be sold and seating will be limited.

Weeks of Oct. 18 and 25: Haunted Halloween Hayride - An alternative activity for Halloween. A portion of the proceeds will go to North Andover Athletic Association and the Enrichment Council.

Smolak Farm is located at 315 South Bradford St. in North Andover. For more information on any of these

Junior Little League All-Stars stunned

Ringwood, N.J.'s 10-run rally in seventh sends them to World Series

By Rick Harrison

The Andover Junior 13-year-old Little League All-Stars couldn't have come any closer.

Michigan had to be on the players' minds as they entered the final inning of the final game at the Eastern Regional Championships last week in Bennington, Vt.

With a 4-2 lead over Ringwood, N.J. in the title game, all Andover had to do was get three outs and allow less than two runs.

But, while the Junior Little League World Series is in progress this week at Taylor, Mich., Andover players are enjoying the last two weeks of summer at home.

Ringwood rallied for 10 runs in the top of the seventh to stun the locals, 12-7, and keep Manager Bill Vickers's well-traveled team from becoming Andover's second in five years to play in a Little League World Series.

Andover, which would have opened against the European 13-year-old champs last Monday, bowed out with a 4-2 record in the Eastern Regionals and 11-2 tournament mark overall.

However, they are the 1992 Massachusetts State champions and without question the second best team in the Northeastern part of the country.

"We also consider ourselves the New England champs because we beat every team we played from this part of the country," noted Assistant Coach Tony Connors.

When co-pitching aces Joe Sciolia and Pat Annese were on the mound, the Andover 13's were better than any team they faced (11-0) including Ringwood.

Annese shackled Ringwood 6-2 in the opening game of the championship round, just hours before New Jersey came back to win the title in dramatic fashion.

Andover also ousted Caroline County, Maryland 6-2 in the semifinals after a 14-4 loss to Ringwood put them in the loser's bracket.

Earlier Eastern Regional victories had come over Bedford, N.H. (5-1) and Southington, Conn. (8-3).

Had the State champs won they would have joined the 1988 Andover National 11-12 year old Major League All-Stars, managed by Jim Arnold and paced by Toby Guzowski and Rick Saggese, as World Series participants.

There was some discussion after the Eastern Regionals that financial considerations would keep Ringwood from going to Michigan, in which case Andover would have been the next choice as the tournament runner-up. That option never materialized, however.

"Initially, after the final game, our kids were pretty disappointed," said Coach Connors. "But they realized how far they had come and the fun they had doing it."

Ringwood, 14-4

The New Jersey champions, who also qualified for the Eastern Regional 12-year-old tournament in Bristol, Conn. last year, thrust Andover into the loser's bracket with this third round triumph.

"Everything that went right for us the first two games went wrong in this one," said Manager Vickers. "It was just one of those days. We made some errors and missed the cutoff man on a couple throws. If we had made two defensive plays (in the 10-run inning) we might have held them to just two runs. Then we'd have had a fighting chance."

Andover jumped to an early 2-0 lead, but Ringwood scored three runs in the bottom of the second and blew it wide open with the first of its two 10-run tournament outbursts in the third inning.

Greg Deane, a rangy righthander with a curve, slider and fastball, came back on one day's rest to throw 117 pitches and stop Andover on five hits.

Deane, who made it three games in five days by also pitching the final, had tossed a one-hitter against Greenville, Pa. in his tourney opener. He fanned five Andover batters and walked four.

Marc O'Sullivan, Dan Gosselin and Sean Connors all pitched for the locals, Connors mopping up effectively by retiring the four batters he faced.

Andover's first run came on a suicide squeeze by Steve Vickers, after walks to O'Sullivan, Mark Tropeano and an error on Joe Sciolia's grounder loaded the bases.

Doubles to center field by catcher Jason Monarca and O'Sullivan (RBI) made it 2-0 in the second before Ringwood exploded.

Andover added an unearned run in the fourth when Monarca reached on a two-out error and was singled home by Pat Annese, and in the sixth Ryan Daniels walked, took third on Monarca's single and crossed on a sacrifice fly by Annese.

In Ringwood's monstrous third inning, John Webb laced a pair of singles and Jim Van Doren added a two-run double and sacrifice fly to lead the charge.

Defensive standouts for Andover were left fielders Rob Busby and

Former resident will work out with Seattle Mariners at Fenway

By Rick Harrison

Rick Saggese is taking it all in stride.

No big deal. Just another workout.

Saggese, the former Andover Little League and Pony League youth baseball standout who moved to Naples, Fla. two years ago, returned to the area today and will be at Fenway Park tomorrow afternoon.

Rick, who almost had to cancel the trip when his Senior Babe Ruth All-Star team came within one victory of going to the World Series in Alabama, will be more than a spectator at the Boston Red Sox-Seattle Mariners game tomorrow night (7:35 p.m.).

Tomorrow afternoon he will spend some time working out with the Seattle players on the Fenway turf.

The Mariners started the week with the worst record in baseball, 47-72 to stand 25 games behind American League West Division leader Oakland.

They will be in town for games tomorrow night, Saturday (1:05 p.m.) and Sunday (1:05 p.m.) afternoons.

"I'm not exactly sure what I'll be doing," admitted Saggese from his Naples home earlier this week. "Probably take some BP (batting practice) and a few flyballs."

"And I think I'll be staying with the (Mariners') team Friday and Saturday nights," added Rick, who was a vital cog in Andover National's 11-12 year old All-Star team that won State and Eastern Regional titles and finished as the fifth best team on the planet in World Series competition at Williamsport, Pa. in 1988.

The opportunity is being afforded Rick by friend Pete Repucci.

"He used to play semi-pro ball and is friends with the Seattle general manager (Woody Woodward)," explained Rick, who is now 16 and a star player for Barron Collier High of Naples as well as the Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars. "He has some thing to do with real estate in Rhode Island, but is still involved in baseball. He and Jay Buhner (Seattle outfielder) are real good friends."

Saggese flew up to Rhode Island today, where he met Repucci, and tomorrow he will be trotting the same Fenway turf where Hall of Famers like Babe Ruth, Ted Williams and Carl Yastrzemski have played.

"I don't know any of the (Mariner) players personally, but this isn't like the first time I've been around professionals," said Rick. "A lot of them are in Florida for spring training."

Saggese, who turns 17 in November, will enter his junior year at Barron Collier High in less than two weeks.

He will start Florida's fall Babe Ruth season in October, while the high school campaign begins next January 10. He will play between 60-70 games within the next few months.

Now a solid 5'11", 170-pounder, Saggese plays right field, pitches and usually bats No. 3 for Barron Collier which went 18-6 last spring and qualified for the District Tournament.

Noted for his "sweet swing" and power as a 12 year-old, Rick still packs a wallop and blasted several home runs for both his high school and Senior Babe Ruth teams.

"I've been hitting really well down here," he offered.

"We've got a pretty good (high school) team coming back this year, and we're moving up to Division 4-A this year," stated Saggese.

The Naples Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars, for whom Rick played center field, won the Florida state championship and the sub-Regionals in Savannah, Ga.

"We went to the Southern Regionals final before losing to the host team from Nashville (last weekend)," said Saggese. "They go to Alabama for the World Series."

Rick doesn't know exactly what he'll be doing every minute between now and Sunday night, when he returns home.

"He (Pete Repucci) wants to surprise me so he hasn't told me much of what's going on," said Rick.

Saggese, who keeps tabs on the Andover High team as best he can, was in the area for a wedding last May and saw Jim Hanning and the Golden Warriors defeat Lawrence 2-1 at Mark Devlin Field while he was in town.

Occasionally family friends from Andover will drop by to see the Saggeses while traveling in Florida.

"Playing pro ball is still in the back of my head," said Rick. "But it's way back there. I know there are many, many things that must happen first."

Not the least of which will be tomorrow's work out with the Mariners.

Blue clinches seventh-straight division title before falling to Methuen Police

By Rick Harrison

Andover Blue, with more lives than the average cat and several escapes to rival those of Harry Houdini, played some excellent back-to-the-wall survival baseball prior to dropping a best-of-3 championship playoff series to the Methuen Police last week.

Blue clinched its seventh straight Suburban Pony League division title by blasting Methuen, 11-2, wiping out a 2-1 deficit with four runs in the fifth inning and six more in the sixth.

The comeback win occurred just 24 hours after Mother Nature offered Blue a reprieve by washing out a game Methuen led 5-0 in the fourth inning.

The locals then dropped the opener in a best-of-3 semifinal round playoff series against Stoneham, but rallied to win the next two games and erase an early 3-0 deficit in the deciding contest.

Those hard-earned victories set up the best-of-3 series between Blue and the Methuen Police for the overall league championship, with defending titlist Blue looking for its sixth SPL crown and 10th in 11 years for Andover teams.

It wasn't to be, however, as Methuen instead won the league for the second time in three years. In 1990 Andover Gold reached the finals and dropped a pair of one-run decisions to Methuen, 3-2 and 10-9.

Blue took a 1-0 lead in last week's title showdown with a 3-1 victory, but Methuen won the second game handily, 12-3, and then edged Blue 1-0 in a classic winner-take-all final despite a brilliant one-hitter from Alex Marshall.

Blue beat Winthrop in last year's final series after edging Methuen in the semifinals.

Methuen swept past Winthrop 9-0 and 10-4 in this year's other playoff semifinal.

Andover Blue completed the season with a 15-4 record while Methuen was 16-4.

into a first place tie with Methuen. The lopsided romp enabled them to finish the regular season at 12-1 while the runner-up Police were 11-3.

Fourteen-year-old righthander Brian Tisbert (1-0), making his first start on a hunch played out by Manager Joe Iarrobino, responded with a complete-game three-hitter at Andover High.

Tisbert also scored the first run in the bottom of the first inning, belting a double and eventually crossing on Rob Derba's sacrifice fly.

Methuen took a 2-1 lead with single runs in the third and fifth, but Blue rallied to score four times in the bottom of the fifth on hits by Tom Gardner, Tisbert, Derba (two-run double), Alex Marshall (RBI), Dana McCann and Jason Caverly (RBI) double).

Alex Marshall's grand slam to straightaway right field highlighted a six-run sixth that also featured singles by Derba (RBI), George Secchiaroli and walks to Hugh Quattlebaum, Tisbert and Todd Harris (RBI).

Marshall had three hits and five RBI, Derba two hits and four RBI, Caverly was 4-for-4 with three doubles and Tisbert laced two hits.

Defensive standouts were Quattlebaum in left and Harris at short. Stoneham, 5-2

Stoneham ousted Lynnfield in a one-game knockout to earn its semi-final berth opposite Blue, and then took the series opener 5-2 at Andover High.

Blue squandered a 2-0 lead as Stoneham tied it with two unearned

"Just Over The Andover Line"

Junior Little League All-Stars stunned in seventh inning

Brian King.
Andover, 6-2

The locals bounced back impressively to eliminate Caroline County, Maryland, which reportedly went to the Eastern Regional 12-year-old tourney last summer and lost to Ringwood.

Undefeated Joe Sciolla (6-0) won his sixth straight on the mound and tossed his sixth consecutive complete game, scattering four hits, fanning six and keeping it interesting with 11 walks.

It was a gutsy performance because "Joe pulled a groin muscle in the third inning," noted Coach Connors. "He had to ice the injury every time we came off the field."

"The kids deserve a lot of credit for coming back with an excellent effort," said Manager Vickers. "They could have dwelled on the loss to New Jersey, but they didn't."

Andover scored an unearned run in the top of the first when Mark Tropeano reached on a two-out error, stole second and Sciolla ripped an RBI double to left center.

The lead jumped to 3-0 in the second stanza as Jason Monarca and Pat Annese drew two-out walks, Marc O'Sullivan continued his heavy hitting with a run-scoring double, and Annese raced across on a passed ball.

Andover made it 5-1 in the fifth without a hit. Pinch-hitter Ryan Daniels walked, took third on a Steve Vickers' sacrifice bunt and Brian King infield out, and scored on a balk after pinch-hitter Dan Gosselin walked and the pair started to pull a delayed double steal. Gosselin later scored when Greg Wojtkun's grounder was misplayed.

In the sixth Pat Annese singled, stole second, took third on a passed ball and scored on Sciolla's suicide squeeze.

O'Sullivan finished with a double and single, while other basehits were stroked by Jeremy Schofield and King.

Caroline County left 14 runners on base in seven innings.

Andover, 6-2

Undefeated Pat Annese (5-0) won his fifth consecutive post-season start and hurled the Andover Juniors' 11th complete game, stopping powerhouse Ringwood on four hits in the opening game of the championship doubleheader.

Annese walked seven and hit one batter, but he worked himself out of several jams with the help of center fielder Marc O'Sullivan who made three diving catches.

Ringwood stranded seven runners in the game. Andover banged out eight hits and broke open a 2-1 game with three runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Jason Monarca walked, O'Sullivan singled, Steve Vickers laid down a suicide squeeze bunt that was misplayed, and RBI singles were spanked by Joe Sciolla and Annese.

Brian King reached on an error and later crossed on O'Sullivan's single in the second, Sciolla singled and came across on a passed ball in the third, and Ryan Daniels singled home Annese in the sixth after the pitcher had singled and stolen second.

Leadoff batter O'Sullivan remained red-hot with a scorching 3-for-3 effort, scoring one run and driving home another.

Annese and Sciolla contributed two hits apiece, Vickers added one, and runs were scored by Jason Monarca, Brian King, Vickers, Sciolla and Annese.

Andover was helped by seven walks and four Ringwood errors.

Shortstop Mark Tropeano joined O'Sullivan as a defensive standout.

Ringwood, 12-7

Two hours later Andover backed the New Jersey champs against the ropes with four runs in the bottom of the third, erasing an early 2-0 deficit, and rode the steady hurling of Dan Gosselin who was making his first tournament start.

Gosselin worked six strong innings before tiring, yielding just six hits and two runs, but Ringwood sent 15 batters to the plate in the 10-run seventh and roughed up Gosselin, along with relievers Marc O'Sullivan and Sean Connors, for five hits and seven walks. There were also three balks called on the Andover pitchers.

Ringwood ironman Greg Deane trudged back to the mound and through another 100+ pitches, giving up eight hits while walking five and whiffing nine.

In the four-run Andover third Gosselin singled, Greg Wojtkun doubled, Jason Monarca walked, Marc O'Sullivan singled (RBI), Steve Vickers and Mark Tropeano dropped consecutive run-producing suicide squeeze bunts, and the final run scored when Joe Sciolla reached on a catcher's interference call.

Andover went down fighting in the bottom of the seventh, rallying for three more runs when Pat Annese belted a two-run triple and scored on Sciolla's infield out.

Vickers, Sciolla, Brian King and Monarca added hits, while O'Sullivan scored twice.

This same basic group of Andover Little Leaguers has won back-to-back District 14 titles in the Major and Junior Divisions, and should be tough to beat as they advance to the Senior Division in the next two years.

STATE REPRESENTATIVE

AGGRESSIVE LEADERSHIP FOR COMPASSIONATE CHANGE

"It is time to re-establish the democratic party as the party of the people instead of the party of the special interest groups. We must insist on a new philosophy of government from our elected officials; a philosophy that insists on a coalition of all social groups such as our educators, our young, our elderly, our labor unions and our corporate and business leaders. A coalition formed not for the benefit of any one special interest, but for the benefit of society itself. This is what I offer you as a candidate for State Representative of the 17th Essex district."

Blue clinches seventh division title before falling to Methuen Police runs in the sixth, and won it with three more in the seventh.

Alex Marshall suffered his first loss, tossing a route-going six-hitter with seven strikeouts and three walks.

Dana McCann slapped a two-run single in the fourth to break a scoreless tie, but the only other Blue safeties were singles by Marshall and Todd Harris.

Blue went down in uneventful 1-2-3 order in the bottom of the seventh.

Blue, 5-0

Andover tied the series as big righthander Justin Connors fired a clutch two-hit shutout, walking four and whiffing six.

Blue scored the only run necessary in the fourth when Rob Derba singled, Alex Marshall walked and Dana McCann ripped an RBI double.

It went to 4-0 in the fifth on singles by Tim McGovern, Connors, Hugh Quattlebaum (RBI) and Brian Tisbert's two-run suicide squeeze.

In the seventh McGovern walked and Connors belted a run scoring double.

Connors contributed two of Blue's five hits.

Defensive standouts were left fielder Quat tlebaum (flagged down two long fly balls), center fielder Marshall (diving catch), second baseman Tisbert and shortstop Todd Harris (hit-robbing stops behind second base bag).

Blue, 11-4

Alex Marshall won the clincher, settling down after a three-run Stoneham first to fire a five-hitter with seven strikeouts and three walks.

Blue, which broke out of a team battling slump with 11 hits, scored five runs after two were out in the bottom of the second. Tim

McGovern singled, Justin Connors was hit by a pitch, Hugh Quattlebaum singled to load the bases, Brian Tisbert hammered a three-run double, Rob Derba lashed an RBI double down the left field line.

SOFTBALL RESULTS

Primary Andover Bank vs. The Bruisers

Kim Adlman played great defense for the Bruisers. Also, playing a strong game were Amy McLaughlin, Josie Gomez and Susie Anderson. The best play of the game was a triple play by Andover Bank. Tina Baraby caught a pop fly, threw the ball to Ellen Donahue on third base, who tagged two of Bruisers' runners. Christine Smaglia, Diane Liu and Robin Harold all contributed to Andover Bank's game.

Andover Bank vs.

The Bruisers

In a rematch after five innings the lead went back and forth and ended in a tie. Edie Muller and Nicloe Murphy hit homeruns for the Bruisers. Erin Zuena and Katie Mullen played a good all-around game.

Andover Bank vs. Robins

Ashley Falk led Andover Bank's offense. Amanda Buchholz led the Robins in hitting. Karen Keough played a strong centerfield and Brandy Carr played well on second and as catcher for Andover Bank. Jillian and Lindsey Mann contributed to the Robins' defense and Melissa McDade made an outstanding double play to Kaitlyn Peletier Bruisers vs. Vale Landscaping

Meri Rawlinson slammed in a key homerun for the Bruisers and defense was led by Marisa Feola, Kim Adlman and Alia Mohammed.

Reds 21 - Vale Landscaping 21

Reds' Lauren Harlow, Emily Parsons and Sara Connor stopped runners at first and home in the third inning. Ashley Daley, Stephanie Casper and Shelby Ferris got some excellent hits for the Vales in the fourth inning.

Robins vs. BlueJays

Sarah Venuti of the Robins hit singles while Andrea Manner's hit loaded the bases. Erin West-away and Amanda Buchholz were also strong hitters. Lindsay Hagopian, Laura Mertes, Pam Risseuw and Allison Wilner were outstanding players for the Blue Jays.

Robins vs. Vale Landscaping

Many runs and excellent plays were made by both teams in this end-of-the-season game, especially by Vale Landscaping's Shelby Ferris. Andrea Daley, Diana Peterson and Karyn Nugent. The Robins' Tracy Pelletier caught a fly ball and Melissa McDade made one of the season's smoothest double plays. Kaitlin Hyde and Kaitlin Pelletier were outstanding in this game as was Hilary Ackerman this season.

Blue falls to Methuen Police

and Todd Harris chased home the fifth run.

It remained 5-3 until the sixth, when Stoneham scored once to cut the Blue lead to one run.

But the locals exploded for six runs in the home half, RBI singles by Connors, Tisbert and Harris to go with a sacrifice fly from Quattlebaum and bases-loaded walk to McGovern.

Tisbert and Quattlebaum had two hits apiece, Ted Witman and Chris Kearn added singles, and defensive standouts were catcher Rob Derba, third baseman Tim McGovern and shortstop Todd Harris.

Playoff Finals

Blue rode the three-hit hurling of Justin Connors (5-1) in the tight 3-1 championship series opener at Andover High.

Blue grabbed a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning when Brian Tisbert doubled home Connors.

But Methuen tied it on Eric Jeanes' RBI double in the top of the sixth.

Andover won it in the bottom half of the inning with a double by Alex Marshall and triple from Dana McCann doing the damage.

Gary Sweatt scattered seven hits and struck out five as Methuen squared the series with a 12-3 win at Potter's Field.

Todd Harris was the lone offensive standout for Blue with three basehits.

Alex Marshall, who finished 6-2 overall, couldn't have been much better as he yielded just one infield single and struck out 10 in Blue's heartbreaking 1-0 final-game loss at Andover High.

Methuen's only hit and the game's lone run came in the top of the first when Eric Jeanes walked, stole second, took third on Andre Gabryjelski's infield single and scored on a wild pitch.

Jay Zannini was equally outstanding on the mound for the champs, firing a two-hit shutout and getting excellent defensive support. Methuen turned two doubleplays and Rob Jeanes preserved the victory with a diving catch in center.

Dana McCann countered with a spectacular grab in the outfield.

Are we pushing our kids too hard?

sion to shut everything out.

As Greg's example shows, however, sports is not the only area in which the potential for pushing exists.

Dr. Larsen sees the educational system as one of the greatest causes of children's stress. He said he believes that to send a child who does not respond to the system in the typical manner through the same grade until he or she gets it right or "until you get sick of it and quit" is wrong.

"Grade repetition is one of the most destructive processes that American education has ever devised," he said. "It is a happy conundrum that you just keep turning kids through it and it won't affect them at all; and that's wrong. It hurts kids a great deal."

Dr. Larsen said that children who are "failing" in the system either need teachers who will find the proper speed to teach them at, if they are simply slower learners, or need educators to find new ways of teaching. He said he does not believe there are enough opportunities for children's creativity to come out.

"(Teachers) give you the topic. I wish they could do it the other way. It would be more fun," said Andy Parker, 13, of Greenwood Road.

"They never say to a teacher, 'You never work up to your potential'" said Dr. Larsen. Dr. Larsen also said he would welcome the chance to draw out children's creativity in new and different ways.

In many ways, Dr. Larsen's ideas about education are similar to those of Richard Reich, a Cambridge resident and economist who has received a great deal of attention recently for his newest book, The Work of Nations. Reich states that in decades past, when America was an industrial giant based on factory production, the American educational system pumped out the type of workers needed for assembly line and other necessary company work. Today, however, the international economic scene has changed. The world seeks webs of problem-identifiers, -solvers and engineers who can create the specialized goods the market requests. There is a greater need for creativity and imagination.

"Workers used to need a strong back, not a strong mind," said former state rep. Susan Tucker.

"One of the things that American education has (failed to create) is the sort of student who comes up with ideas and likes to create," said Dr. Larsen, striking on similar themes to Reich's. "We are a fill-in-the-blank society and the only thing (students) have to look forward to is more blanks."

Mr. Sullivan, a teacher in the Andover system for over two decades, feels differently.

"I totally disagree with that. We have the courses like Odyssey, which was in Life magazine," he said. "I think it has gone the other way. Things have changed a lot in the last couple of years."

Although most students said they did not have much literal fill-in-the-blank type of work, they did say that almost all of their class time, with the exception of some art classes, was greatly structured. Yet, when questioned students stated a marked preference for "the creative stuff," finding it "more interesting."

Playing for keeps begins early.

"I like the creative things. When it's more fun you tend to get into that," said Greg Murphy. Again, though, this is not to say that no memorization should take place, simply that a more proper balance of the two needs to be found.

"I think I probably learn more if they give you the topic. As much as you don't want to do if it still sticks in your head," said Andy, a West Middle School student. "But each week she (his teacher) gives you a spelling list and you have to memorize it. And it doesn't stick with you. In a couple of weeks you've forgotten it."

Another problem that Dr. Larsen, and most parents see, is what he calls the corruption of fantasy, or the rise of Nintendo.

"We are giving so many alternatives to internally generated fantasies that kids will no longer create their own," said Dr. Larsen. "We don't let kids own boredom," and figure out what to do with it. He suggests giving children wood and screws and other scraps and having them create whatever they wish.

But it seems from interviews with children the reason they end up playing Nintendo is not for the sheer enjoyment of it. Most, in fact, play alone when they play and only because they say "there's no one around to play with."

"If there was any chance I could get, I'd go out with my friends," said Greg Murphy.

Unfortunately, according to the youngsters, there are very few neighborhoods with an abundance of children.

"We may be so spread out," said Mr. Sullivan, the coach and teacher. "We don't have a lot of kids on one block."

The children have a lot of ideas about what this town needs to make it more exciting and less susceptible to the statement of, as Mr. Sullivan said he's heard, "I drink because there's nothing to do."

Bike trails, arcades, bowling alleys, "fun" stores for kids, and skateboard ramps were all ideas from kids who say they have to "just hang uptown or go to Friendly's or McDonalds."

"Hey," said Andy Parker, "if you want you could tell the people that Andover would do a lot better for kids if you had something. A big arcade where people hang out or a bike plaza or something."
